AQUEDUCT ERRORS.

Gov. Hill Throws a Bomb in the Legislature.

He Recommends the Abolishment of the Present Board.

And Favors the Creation of a New Commission.

Two Other Messages and a Row in Both Houses.

> SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. ALBANY, July 19.

Gov. Hill carried consternation among the Republicans to-day by sending in three more messages. One dealt with the Aqueduct frauds, a second recommended an enumeration of the inhabitants of the State, a third provided for a Constitutional Convention, while a fourth defined what was meant by the Penal Institution of the State.

The Governor's first message ran as fol-STATE OF NEW YORK, EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, ALBANY, July 18, 1888.

To the Legislature:

In my communication to the Legislature of July 17, 1888, I recommended for your consideration "the proper employment of convicts in the penal institutions of the Stale." This language is broad and was intended to cover all institutions where prisoners are confined for crime. I am informed that it is claimed by some members of your honorable body that the words "penal institutions of the State "only include the State prisons. I do not think that the words will fairly bear so narrow a construction, but in order to remove all questions as to the power of the Legislature at this session to dispose of the whole subject, i hereby recommend for your consideration at the present extraordinary section the proper employment of the convicts in two State in Sons, penitentaries, reformatories, houses of the up, industrial schools, jails and other Institutions waste persons convicted of crime are confined for tenisunent. To the Legislature : convicted of crime are confined to straighment.

It is desirable that the whole subject of convict labor in the Sate should be disposed of in one clear and comprehensive bill.

DAVID B. HILL. The second and third messages of the Governor were as follows :

STATE OF NEW YORK, EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, ALBANY, July 18, 1888.

To the Legislature:

I recommend for your consideration at the present extraordinary session the following subjects:

First—An enumeration of the inhabitants of this State, as required by the Constitution.

Second—A measure providing for a constitutional convention in pursuance of the Constitution and in obedience to the will of the people expressed in 1886.

Here are the Governor's views on the aque-

ALBANY, July 18, 1888.

ALBANY, July 18, 1888.

To the Legislature:

ALBANY, July 18, 1888.

By chapter 490 of the laws of 1883 the Legislature provided for the construction of an aqueduct for the city of New York, and designated the Mayor, the Computolier and the Commissioner of Public Works of said city and three citizens named in the built as a Board of Aqueduct Commissioners to have charge of such construction. The act of 1883 was amended by chapter 337 of the laws of 1883 was amended by chapter 337 of the laws of 1883, whereby the Mayor and the Computolier were omitted as Commissioners, and three persons, to be named by the Gouernor, were to be appointed as additional Commissioners and confirmed by the Senate, and thereafter three persons were so appointed and confirmed, and are serving at the present time.

The present Aqueduct Commission, therefore, consists of one official of the city, to wit: the Commissioner of Public Works, who is a member exception, and six citizens, three named in the act of 1883, and three appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate under the act of 1886.

I am advised that it has appeared upon the investigation now penaling in regard to the Aqueduct and other matters in the city of New York that the

I am advised that it has appeared upon the invisitiation now pending in regard to the Aqueduct and other matters in the city of New York that the Board as now constituted has not been a harmonious body, but that for some time there has existed much discord and a lack of proper co-operation among its members, whereby public interests have suffered in some degree.

I am aiso informed that two or more of the Commissioners have had nighter relations with some of the contractors or sus-contractors, thereby committing an impropriety, even if nothing more subjecting them to just criticism and necessarily emuarrassing them in the proper discharge of their duties.

It is claimed that other matters have been shown It is claimed that ofter matters have been shown affecting the letting of contracts and the performance thereof to the detriment of the interests of the city. Of all these matters, however, I have no accurate or official knowledge, as the investigation, which is exparte, is still pending, and no report thereof has yet been presented, and under such circumstances it would be manifestly improper for me to express an opinion thereon, especially in view of the fact that if the charges alleged against the Commissioners are finally established proper for me to express an opinion thereon, especially in view of the fact that if the charges alleged against the Commissioners are finally established they are liable to removal, and proceedings for such purpose would unquestionably be stimulated. The suggestion which I desire to make concerning the Aqueduct Commissioners is not, therefore, based upon any presumption of the trath of the allegations made against them, but is founded upon an inherent defect or mistaken policy in the two statutes in question creating the commission arising out of the improper manner in which the whole commission was created.

It must be conceded that both of the statutes violated the principle of "Home Rule," which has come to be regarded as essential to the proper government of municipalities.

That general principle I have usually endeavored to enforce, and whenever a departure from it has been permitted I am satisfied a mistake has been made.

The statute of 1883, approved by my predecessor, tamed three commissioners in the bill itself. That

The statute of 1885, approved by my predecessor, named three commissioners in the bill itself. That was unwise. If any other than officials were to be designated those persons should have been selected by the local authorities and not by the Legislature. Here the first mistake was made.

The statute of 1895 continued the error, but, while not naming the tarce additional commissioners in the bill, it empowered the Governor of the State to select them and the Senate to confirm them. This was likewise a mistake. The additional Jommissioners should have been appointed by the Mayor of New York.

It is submitted at this time, when public attention has been called to the subject, that it is wise of New York.

It is submitted at this time, when public attention has been called to the subject, that it is wise to return to first principles, and to permit the local authorities of that city to control the further construction of the Aqueduct by their own officials, or by citizen Commissioners of their own choosing, and not by Commissioners selected either by the Governor and Senate or the Legislature.

This would give that city the benefit of the principles.

OUT OF THE CITY STREETS.

BY JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

AM partial to red-haired people, and perhaps that is the reason why I was first attracted by Thomas Tymcock, aged ten years. I make no apology for patronymic, for it was his his mother somewhere below Christopher street and within a few blocks of the North River.

In the beginning Tommy was a newspaper boy. A newspaper boy resemples, in one respect, a and would never be anything else. I was having my boots blacked one afternoon on a corner near Broadway, when Tommy approached me and offered for sale a copy of an evening paper. I had already read the sheet in question, so I declined the transaction. But Tommy said: "This ere's a closin' out sale, boss; you sin't de man to discourage trade. She's your'n for a cent!" So I bought

There is, or used to be, a kind of clown in the circuses whose wig is of an unnatural and preposterous reduess. Tommy's hair was evidently copied from this wig, and, if anything, it bettered the original. To give it full effect he went with-ciple of "Home Rule," to which it is entitled, in reference to its municipal affairs, and would relieve the Legislature from Further responsibility in connection with the construction of a purely local improvement, and the passage of such a measure would not of itself be a reflection upon any of the Commissioners, but a condemnation of a vicious system of legislation, unadvisedly adopted, and witch should not longer be sauctioned.

The repral of the Amendatory Act or 1886 alone, leaving the act of 1888 antouched, would be a tacit approval of the latter act and not furnish an adequate remedy.

It would simply partially correct a mistake and still perpetuate a wrong system of legislation.

I am advised that many of the complaints made against the Aqueduct management arms out of the act of 1883, and before the reorganization of 1886 it was the original Commission, created under the act of 1883, and before the reorganization of 1886 it was the original Commission that awarded the principal contracts alleged to be disadvantageous to New York City, and controlled their performance during a period of about eighteen montas.

The faircat, best and most advisable course is to enact a measure abolishing the present Board and creating a new Commission to consist of the Mayor, the Compttoller, the Commissioner of Puthe Works and the President of the Board of Aldermen (who should be Commissioner ex-ogétio), and three citizens to be appointed by the Mayor, who should constitute the remaining Commissioners.

Judge Yates and Mr. Sheehan, the Democratic leader, clawed one another for a while in the Assembly, and then the Republicans sprung an adjournment until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

In the Senate, meantime, another rumpus was on. Col. Murphy immediately on the reception of the message moved that that which referred to the Aqueduct should be referred to the New York delegation with instructions to report a bill providing that the Mayor, Computroller, Commissioner of Public Works, President of the Board of Aldermen and three citizens to be named by the Mayor shall constitute the Aqueduct Commission.

Senator Fassett wouldn't have it that way, After rehearsing a g eat yarn about the Aqueduct abuses, attacking the Governor and glorifying the committee, of which he is Chairman, he gave way to Canalman John Raines.

"THERE IS A SCAB ABOUT."

An Engineer Scratched His Hand and In Consequence Was Shot At.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD,] OSCEOLA, Ia., July 19.—As the east-bound freight on the C., B. and Q. and a bound freight on the C., B. and Q. and a south-bound freight on the narrow-guage road met at the Junction yesterday, the narrow-gauge engineer scratched his hand, which is said to signify "There is a scab about." The Q. engineer drew his revolver and fired at the narrow-gauge engineer, but missed his mark.

The narrow-guage man then ran his engine upon the crossing and had the Q. engineer arrested.

Officer McCabe said that was all true, and then Mr. House introduced a diagram showing that the juggernaut was going west, and that at the time it ran down Mrs. Levy it was opposite 269 West Twenty-third street.

This was about a hundred feet east of Eighth avenue. The wheel of the car had not passed completely over Mrs. Levy's body, but was resting partly upon her. Her head was lying on the north rail.

To Mr. Macdona the officer said he did not know the name of the boy who informed him of the accident, and had been unable to find him since.

Dr. Emil D. Costales, of 268 West Twenty-third street, was next called. He is a dentist. He testified that he saw the accident. It was between 4 and 4.30 r. M.

He was looking out at the window when he saw Mrs. Levy emerge from the dressmaker's house opposite. She was crossing the street

I was not. And now, after two or three indescribable moments, the other boy was down. Tommy actually jumped over him in the exuberance of his impassioned vitality. The other boy took advantage of the opportunity, scrambled to his feet and set off at headlong speed in the most available direction. Tommy started after him, but after a few aces he halted, sent a taunting yell after his defeated adversary, strutted to and fro over the place of combat, like a little bantam, and finally, catching my eye, he wiped his bloody little nose on the sleeve of his ragged shirt and gave me a ghastly My left boot had been blacked by this time, so I approached Tommy, with a severe countenance, and, after reproaching him for his lawless conduct and warning him against doing so again, I asked him his name and where he live L. He said his mother was a washerwoman. He was reticent as to his father. I could not make out whether be were dead or decamped, or waether Tommy had never had one. At last I gave Tommy 10 cents, and never expected to see him again.

The above episode is not particularly noble or heroic, but it is characteristic of Tommy, and to some extent I suppose of red-headed boys in general, and, therefore, I have recorded it.

I was living at this period in a flat near Washington Square, and my laundress being unsatts factory, it occurred to me to have recourse to Mrs Tymcock. I round her at the address Tommy had given me with her arms in the tub.

She was a thin and nervous woman, and might once have bad a sort of prettiness. She seemed to

Mr. House, in his character of counsel for the railway company, tried to show that Dr. Costale's view of the accident was not good, as he was in his window, eighteen feet above the surface of the street and 100 feet from the accident, but the witness was clear in his and The task of ascertaining who is criminally responsible as the slayer of Mrs. Sophia Levy, of 21 West Fiftieth street, who was killed on the 10th inst. by a Twenty-third street bobtail car, was begun by Coroner Messemer and a jury shortly after 11 o'clock street, were arraigned in Tombs Police Court this morning.

Mr. Walsh stated that on May 23 the men in question were sent to Hoboken to do some work on a ship's cargo, but found that they could not get at it before the next day.

The men demanded exorbitant pay for the work, and when it was refused Coopers' Union No. 2 issued an order that Walsh's men should not go to work until the men's claims were settled.

Mr. Walsh had to pay them the amount demanded because he had work waiting which could not be neglected.

After Walsh and his foreman had given their evidence, the case was again adjourned until next Thursday afternoon.

CONSPIRACY

Swindling Discovered in the Brooklyn Navy-Yard.

A Clever Method of Defrauding the Government.

One Arrest Made and Others Likely to Follow.

At last one of the conspiracies to defraud the Government which have extended over a period of twenty years has been unearthed at the Navy-Yard and an ex-employee has been arrested. Other arrests, it is thought, will follow.

The man arrested is Daniel Laird, now florist at East New York. He was dismissed from the yard where he had been employed for twenty-six years a week or so ago.

At that time he held the position of Superintendent of Mills, and besides acted as receiver of provisions. He was arrested late Wednesday night at the Broadway Park, where he was attending a picnic.

The arrest was made by United States Marshal Stafford in person. With him were Paymaster Robert W. Allen, of the United States Navy; Mr. J. Monroe Heiskell, specially detailed from the Department of Justice, and Deputy United States Marshal Biggart.

Biggart.

The man submitted quietly to arrest, but informed Marshal Stafford that if he made a statement it would shake the two cities from statement it would shake the two cities from foundation to roof.

Whatever he had done he did as a subordinate and acting under orders.

The complaint on which the arrest was made is sworn to by Paymaster Joel Porter Leomis, general store keeper in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, who accuses Laird and "and John S. Mars" with conspixing to defraud the government by making it "pay more than the market price for goods, wares and mechandise" used for naval supplies, and preventing just competition in the matter of bids.

venting just competition in the matter of bids.

Laird is accused of sending an alleged standard sample of tea to Francis H. Leggett & Co. by C. J. Caughey for a bid, whereas the sample so shown was far better than the Government called for.

Leggett & Co.'s bid on this sample was of course more than that put in by the bidder who got the genuine sample.

The Government in Washington learned of the conspiracy three weeks ago, through several New York firms.

The warrant for Laird's arrest was issued yesterday, and he was held in $2,500 bail to-day

While the matter was yet in doubt, I happened to hear of a vacant place in one of the messenger-boy offices. These boys had regular pay and a unif rm; and though the hours were iong and the work pretty hard, I thought that a fellow of so much native intelligence and energy as Tommy would be sure to get on, and might in a few years find himself compara-Tommy's questions were so particular and realistic that my resources of knowledge and observation tively well off. So I opened the thing to Tommy and his mother, in conclave assembled. Mrs. Tymcock strongly advocated the idea; it seems she tempt. He forbore to express it in words, but it did not share her son's enthusiasm about butchery. Tommy at first showed a pronounced reluctance; the messenger boy business seemed to him be-neath the dignity of one who had dreamed of porkpacking. It was lacking in blood and substance. But his mother put the matter to him in a personal and emotional light and I dwelt upon the practical and business side, and at last poor Tommy yielded, though with rather an ill grace, and I believe he went away afterwards and wept hearity in secret.
